

Workshop Outline

The following is a possible workshop outline for what a first session could look like in a Delaware school or community. It integrates civic learning, leadership development, and nonviolence in a school or community setting.

*Note: These activities can also be completed through an online workshop through zoom or a teams meeting. It could also be implemented into a live chat discussion forum, to create multiple pathways for participation.

Topic & Activities	Goals	Estimated Time
Introductions & Icebreakers Activity: -Going around introducing yourselves (name, a fun fact, and one social issue you are passionate about)	-Get to know each other to be comfortable working in teams -Build trust with each other -Reduce systemic barriers	10 Minutes
Hands on Civic Learning Models Activities: -Begin with a lesson on the US Constitution and encourage students/participants to make their own mini constitution -Organize into small groups, choose a focus issue, research it, create goals for this issue, and share results	-Innovative approaches to civic learning -Respecting other's views and seeing issues from other perspectives	90 Minutes

-Interactive student-centered lessons (civics games, role-playing simulations, and using digital tools)	-Building community relationships
Leadership Development Activity: -Organize into groups and work together to create a public policy solution for a focus issue different than the one worked on before	-Taking hands on civic learning and taking it one step further, stepping up as leaders to enact change	30 Minutes
Strategic Nonviolence Activities: -Begin with lessons on nonviolent history, tactics, and community organizing -Role playing and simulations (students practice nonviolent conflict resolution through teachings/simulations of boycotts, sit-ins, and public demonstrations)	-Learn the importance of strategic nonviolence and why it is the most effective method -Create space for change -Address systemic inequities by including marginalized voices	60 Minutes

Conclusion & Takeaways Activities: -Regroup and share takeaways, lessons learned, and ideas for possible future civic engagement ideas	-Forged new connections with others -Learned new and simple ways that everyone can bring about change	20 Minutes
